G. SHAW,

Respectfully informs the public, he has received from

ROBERT JOHNSTON,

Apothecary, No. 20, Green street, Soho, London, a fresh and very considerable supply of his highly esteemed Medicine.

AWARE of the depredations made on every public medicine of established repute and extensive sale, R. Johnston, obtained the King of England's Patent for his invention, not "to recommend" but "to distinguish," Whitehead's Essence of Mustard from

SPURIOUS IMITATIONS.

"Five years have now elapsed since Mr. Johnston first made known to the world this very extraordinary medicine; during this short period, its efficacy has been so clearly demonstrateed that its sale has far exceeded any former example; comparitively there are few families in England or the United States which have not either heard of or experienced its beneficial effects and with heartfelt satisfaction he had the happiness to declare Whitehead's Essence of Mustard has cured more persons afflicted with Rheumatisms, Gout, Lumbago, Palsy, Complaints of the Stomach and other Painful Maladies.

Than all the Medicines ever before made public, indeed, the instances, of its efficacy and letters of acknowledgment from "the most respectable characters" are so numerous that a large volume could not possibly contain them, it has also obtained the approbation of the most eminent men of the faculty and is honoured by the use and recommendation of the first families in England, Ireland and America.

A COUNTERFEIT.

R. JOHNSTON has reason to believe a large quantity under the name of "Improved Essence of Mustard," as well as many others ha been shipped for America, and considers it his duty to prevent imposition and disappointment.

He therefore requests the afflicted to be particular in the purchase of his bottles, boxes, labels, and bill of directions which are closely copied, and words "by royal authority," artfully substituted for the words "by the king's patent" which may elude common observation.

The Genuine is distinguished by the signature of R. Johnston, in his own hand writing on each label, and as an additional security is further signed on the outside wrapper by his only agent for the United States, G. SHAW, No. 129 Chesnut street, Philadelphia, by whom it is sold wholesale and retail, in pills and in a fluid state at one dollar each, box or bottle

FOR CHILBLAINS, SPRAINS AND BRUISES,

It is a certain and effectual remedy, seldom requiring more than three or four applications.

To the candid and liberal of the FACULTY, R. Johnston respectfully submits the following observations. The Fluid Essence of Mustard, is an embrocation worthy their particular attention, it differs in its nature from all others, and is out of the beaten tract of general practice—It is an active stimulant, easily controuled; may be either increased or diminished in its strength by the different methods of use, it is both elegant and convenient and is frequently found in the extemporaneous prescriptions of their brethren in England.

The above Genuine Medicine, as well as many others of the first celibrity may be had by appointment of G. Shaw, of Mr. G. Bailey, Wilmington, Dr. Barrill, Maiden Lane, New-York, Messrs. Bailey and Walker, Charleston, William Black, Salem, (N. J.) Charles Hunitch, Lancaster, A. C. Jorden, Norfolk, John Roberts, do. David Keen, Sweet Springs, Virginia, R. Lee, Baltimore, I. & J. Mantz, Fredericktown, Maryland, G. W. Mancius, Albany, Dr. Vansolingen, New-York, Messrs. Titford & Son, do. Messrs. Ross & Douglas, Pittsburg, John Webster, Wilmington, James Wilson, do. Richard Winter & Co. Savannah, and in every principal town in the United States.

N. B. The public are desired to enquire for Whitehead's Essence of Mustard, all others being a base and spurious imitation.

GEO. SHAW.

120, Chesnut street, where Venders may be supplied.

"Caution against Counterfeits."

Agents are appointed by G. Shaw in every principal town of the United States, and there is no certainty of purchasing the Genuine Essence of Mustard in any part of America, unless it is signed on the outside wrapper by G. Shaw, No. 129, Chesnut Street, Philadelphia, where shopkeepers are supplied and a liberal discount allowed them.

PHILADELPHIA,

TUESDAY EVENING, MAY 21.

From the Salem (Mass.) Gazette.

TO MR. Wm. COBBETT.

IN looking over your Country Porcupine of a late date, I happened to cast my eye upon the following words: "The communication in this day's paper on the close of the century is the most ingenious that I have seen." Knowing the usual accuracy of your judgment and justness of criticism, I turned immediately to the piece, in hopes of seeing every difficulty removed, which had created a "difference in opinion on the apparently simple question, of when the 18th century closes." And perhaps you may think it "somewhat curious" that the clearness of reasoning therein exhibited should fail to operate conviction upon any one of your readers.

Your communicator says, "we call it 1799 until 1800 commences" Now, if 1800 commences when we cease to date 1799 is it not evident that 1800 does not end when we cease dating 1799? But 1800 years must be ended, in order to complete 18 centuries. How then does the nineteenth century begin at the close of the 1799th year of the christian era? 'Tis true, the author of the communication allows that "the year 1800 does not close until the last day of it; but yet, he says, the 18th century closes on the beginning of it." This would make a difference of one year between the close of a century and the close of the hundredth year. But are not the beginning and end of a century the same as the beginning and end of its first and last year? How the eighteenth century can be closed before the close of the eighteen hundredth year does not seem to be clearly ascertained by his method of reasoning. If assertion were always to be regarded as proof, his argument would indeed be valid and his inference just.

Another argument your writer derives from the well known timepiece, called the clock. But either he or myself must have been very inattentive to this useful piece of mechanism. He says "an hour is finished on the conclusion or expiration of the fifty-ninth minute." Now, if the hour be completed at the end or expiration of the fifty-ninth minute, I must request to be informed where he gets the sixtieth minute; for every one knows that sixty complete minutes go into the composition of an hour. Perhaps it will be said that the hour and its first minute do not begin at the same instant; and then the hour, having the start of its minute, will come to a "conclusion" at the moment when its last or "sixtieth minute commences." If this is, as it appears to be, his reasoning, I should still like to know why any hour and the first minute of that hour do not commence at the very same instant. For it is very evident, if an hour and its first minute commence at the same instant of time, that the same hour and its last or sixtieth minute must both expire at the same instant; otherwise an hour must be either longer or shorter than sixty minutes.

The last method of illustration employed by the author of the communication is borrowed from an ancient designation of time, denominated Lustrum. "A Lustre, he tells us, is a period of five years," Then he goes on to enumerate them very distinctly from "January the 1st, 1800;" and at the end of five years we are again informed that "the lustre is completed." This is indeed every word of it as true as the first book of Genesis. For if a lustre is a period of five years, most certainly five years will make a complete lustre. But, instead of the Romans, suppose we let the Greeks decide the question. They computed time by the olympiad, which you know is a period of four years. Now, if we begin to reckon the olympiad from January the 1st 1800, counting one by one to find out the number, we shall find it at the end of four years that the olympiad "is compleated." But what is the inference? Nothing, say you, to the purpose, in the decision of a question concerning dates in the christian era. I perfectly agree in your opinion. But then the Grecian method is equally as applicable to the present question as the Roman. There is nothing in either of them worthy to be called sophistry; for they are both alike trifling, when brought as arguments in the present debate.

But to return to your communicator. He thus proceeds—"But according to the other doctrine we must wait until the fifth year is elapsed." This he deems "an error in computation." What! is it an error in computation to say the fifth year must elapse in order to complete five years? Must not the first year elapse in order to complete one year; the second in order to compleat two years; the third, to compleat three; the fourth, to compleat four; and of course must not "the fifth year have elapsed" to complete five years? If the affirmative of this query be true (and I am willing to refer it to your own impartial and candid decision) what becomes of the "error in computation?" If your communicator had bestowed a little attention on the distinction between the ordinal and cardinal numbers, he might perhaps have escaped the perplexity arising from the clock, and the lustre, and all such "difficult topics" of argument, as were liable to embarrass his mind and lead him astray.

But to proceed. This "error in computation, we are told, though difficult to detect in a period of an hundred years, is very palpable in the small measure of five years." I did not mean to smile, but surely it will not be thought rude to admire the extent and clearness of a person's intellect. He seems to comprehend with wonderful facility the operation of an argument which is confined to the compass of five years; but when from the same premises (for both depend on the same data) an inference is required which shall hold true for the long "period of an hundred years." then difficulty arises. Hoc opus, hic labor est. But why is it more difficult to tell how many years make a hundred than it is to tell how many make five? Yet we are told that "an error" in the computation of the one "is palpable," while in the other it is "difficult to be detected."

The decision of this "apparently simple question," which has given rise to so much ingenuity in playing with words without application to the subject, appears to rest entirely upon a single fact. And this perhaps can be ascertained only by recurring to authentic chronological history. The whole inquiry then is, whether the first christian chronologists disposed their annual dates in the ordinal or in the cardinal method of computation. Ascertain which of these was employed at the commencement of the christian era, and not another word can be said. Fix the beginning, and the end is fixed of course. It will then be no more "difficult" to determine the close of a century, than it is to tell the close of a year, or an hour, or a minute. Inform me how old Christ was at the commencement of his first year, and I will tell you how old he will be at the commencement of the year 1800.

Before I quit the subject permit me to intimate to the author of the communication, that however the question may terminate, the issue will be unfavorable to his method of reasoning. For, whether we date in the cardinal or in the ordinal method, still the sixtieth minute must be finished in order to compleat an hour; the fifth year must have elapsed to compleat a lustrum; the hundredth year must be ended to compleat a century; and, by necessary consequence, the last day of the eighteen hundredth year must elapse in order to compleat eighteen centuries. Thus it appears, that which ever "doctrine" prevail, the decision must be against him, or rather against his reasoning.

With your permission, I would just ask him a "simple question" or two. He asserts that "the numbers used for marking time are retrospective." Now I would enquire what time was retrospected by the first year of the christian era? I would also inquire whether the first year and the first century of the christian epoch began both at the same instant? If they did, where is the inaccuracy of "confounding the idea of a year with that of a century?" If they commence at the same moment, they proceed together, and when a hundred revolutions of the one are completed, they must both close at the same instant. Here is nothing which appears to indicate a "confusion of ideas." If they begin alike, they must end alike; and every one knows that an hundred of the one make one of the other. Consequently, the hundredth year must be finished to compleat the century.

One word more. Your communicator speaks of a "space of time between the past year and the succeeding one." Now I always supposed that when one year was past another succeeded immediately without any interval between them, but this "space of vacation," as he calls it, seems to be destitute of any appropriate appellation. He therefore looks about to find a name by which it may be represented; and, as it has none of its own, he concludes to borrow one from the past year. "To avoid circumlocution the name of the past year is continued" thro' this intervenient space "till the succeeding one begins." But this, he informs us, "is merely for the sake of convenience;" and at some apology for borrowing the name of another year to designate the intermediate, nameless vacation." he observes that "to mark the minuter divisions of time in a given portion, it is not material by what name the period is called, provided it be designated." Now, if this intervening "space or vacation" be equal to one year, then it will follow that he calls the space of two years by one and the same name again: I have already taken notice of his saying that dates are retrospective. Now, if the name, which he borrowed of past years, was retrospective, it will look like adding another year to the term of two years already mentioned; and then we shall have a period equal to three years designated by one name or date. This appears very much like confounding one year with another, which must produce at least as much confusion of ideas as would arise "from confounding the idea of a year with that of century."

With due respect, I am, Sir a reader of your extensive and useful paper.

NEW-YORK May 18.

A Gentleman who arrived here on Thursday last from New Orleans, informs us, that on the 22d of April a company of seventy American troops under the command of Captain Shamder, passed through that place for Mobille, to take possession of the lines.

Mr. Ellicot, the United States Surveyor General, left New Orleans a few days before.

As yet we have been unable to procure accurate returns of the votes for senators of the Southern District—but, from what we have seen, John B. Cole and Richard Hatfield, Esqrs. Federal Candidates, will have a handsome majority of between three and four hundred votes.

A knowledge of every new manœuvre of the French pirates, must be of service to our seamen.

Capt. Moncrief, of the ship Appollo, on his passage from Liverpool to this port, was bore down upon by a French cutter privateer of 12 guns, full of men, with an American ensign flying, and the French flag stuffed in the shrouds below it.—Capt. M. fiered a gun to windward, and hoisted the American jack; upon which the cutter bore away—Capt. M. wore ship, gave her a few shots, and proceeded on his voyage. Neither the deception, guns, or number of men on board the privateer, intimidated captain Moncrief.

The Lazzaroni of Naples, amounted to 60,000 were not subjugated by the French till after sixty hours fighting in the streets, on the terraces of the houses, and in the midst of the flames.

MELANCHOLY.

On Wednesday evening a poor disconsolate woman, seemingly delirious, with a beautiful female infant, about five months old, was observed on Valck's wharf, by persons passing that way; they had not time to approach her untill she plunged with her infant into the water; by their united efforts, they however saved both from drowning, and brought her to the house of Godfried Hartung, in Camden street, where every thing possible was done to restore her to resignation, but all in vain; giving her infant in solemn charge to Mrs. Hartung, after complaining of sickness & retiring to rest, she found means of going to the attick story, and about nine o'clok yesterday morning threw herself from a window about sixty feet high; and broke her thigh, her arm & breast bone. She lingered about an hour and an half, and then expired.

She is said to be the wife of a man named Boyce, who sailed from this port about eight months since, and the reason assigned for the above melancholy accident, is, the report of his loss at sea. Mrs. Hartung, at present, has the child under her protection. Humanity here calls aloud for the assistance of all well disposed persons, and hopes are entertained, that amongst established societies in this city, something may be done towards the support of the hapless innocent, thrown on the world, deprived of parents, and trusting only to the mercy of those, whom the untimely fate of the mother has caused to be a protector.

May, 18.

Another detatchment of Marines, enlisted in this city, within these few weeks past, by lieutenant Philip Edwards, left town yesterday morning for Philadelphia. This body of men does equal credit to the attention of the lieutennant, as that before enlisted for this service. The rendezvous is still continued near Gray's gardens, where the martial sons of Columbia, whose pulses beat high for their country's wrongs, have an opportunity of enlisting in her cause.

A fellow was taken up to day for wearing a false face, but as it is a thing so very common now-a-days, we understand, he was dismissed! There is no doubt, however, but it would be doing a service to society if this practice could be abolished.

Foreign Intelligence.

SALONICA, (Turkey) Feb. 2.

The Divan is seriously employed in the means of driving the French out of Egypt; in consequence of which the Grand Seignior had issued a firman, by which he orders, that all the transports ships which could be procured should be assembled at Smyrna, for the embarkation of our troops. For this purpose Cara Osman Oglou, our Pacha, has been ordered to select the choicest troops of Natolia for that expedition. The Pacha of Acri has received a Carte Blanche, and all the other Pachas of Syria have been enjoined to pay obedience to his commands. Buonaparte, in expectation of being attacked on that side, is fortifying Damietta with the greatest activity, and has placed in it a numerous garrison. It is however supposed, that the Pacha of Acri will not act seriously, until the armament preparing at Smyrna shall have arrived before Alexandria, in order to make a combined attack on the two opposite points.

A Greek vessel, containing three Frenchmen in disguise, and amongst them the secretary of Buonaparte, was captured by a Turkish ship, and the prisoners sent to Constantinople—There was found upon them, in sequins and piasters, about a million and a half livres tournois. The Republican general does not allow the exportation from Egypt of Coffee or Rice, both articles of great importance in the Levant, and the scarcity of which is much felt at Constantinople.

PARIS, March 11.

It appears that the passage of the Rhine was effected in three columns, in the following manner: Gen. St. Cyr passed at Fort Vauban, with the left wing of the army; Jourdan in person with the centre at Kehl; and General Ferino with the right wing at Hungiuen and Basle.

The centre of the army has received considerable reinforcements. The command of the cavalry was entrusted to Gen. Klein. Boussiere is appointed inspector-general. The corps of engineers is under the direction of Gen. Marescot.

It is said that General Massena attacked the Grison country on the 2d inst. and that on the 4th Gen. Jourdan's head quarters were at Gengerback.

Letters from Strasburgh, dated the 3d inst. mention, "That the French army had marched into Suabia by the county of Wirtemburgh, and was to proceed until it met the Austrian army, commanded by the Archduke Charles, which it is said has advanced as far as Ulm, and even beyond that place. Our army is not to halt for five days. The first stroke will probably be dreadful. The French division commanded by Gen. Ferino crossed the bridge of the Rhine at Basle on the 1st and took the road of Frickthal. His head quarters are at Rheinfield, but will not, it is supposed, remain there long. One division of the army of Mentz passes the Rhine opposite Philipsburg, and blockades that fortress, in which there are about 1700 troops of the empire."

FRANKFORT, March 9.

The following is the estimate of the Austrian forces circulated here:—100,000 infantry, and 14 regiments of cavalry, to be employed in Italy; on the Lech, 100,000 infantry and 23 regiments of cavalry; in the Tyrol 36 battalions; and on the frontiers of the Hereditary States, 24 battalions of infantry.

LONDON, March 20.

It is expected, as the French Directory has the absolute controul of all the Batavian forces, that a Duth squadron will be sent to form a part of the expedition from Brest.

Extract of a letter from Naples, dated the 17th of December, which did not arrive till last week.

"On the 14th, I supped at Sir William Hamilton's when Lord Nelson shewed us the presents the Grand Seignior had sent him—they were brought here by an Effendi or Secretary, in the Alcmene frigate, which sailed last from Alexandria. His lordship says, that the Effendi and his Suit (13 in number) performed their part with great gravity and dignity. They put on their noble robes in his anti chamber, and presented the aigrette on cushings, after the oriental custom. The robe is of scarlet cloth, lined with the finest sable imaginable, and of inestimable value. The agriette is a kind of feather; it represents a hand with thirteen fingers, which are of diamonds, and allusive of the thirteen ships taken and destroyed at Alexandria—the size that of a child's hand about 6 years old when opened; the centre diamond and the four round it may be worth about 1000l. each, and there are about 300 others well set. With these two presents were several others of less value, and a letter full of assurances and friendship from the Grand Seignior. The Alcmene's officers say, that Buonaparte is at Grand Cairo with 22 000 men; that he had sent a flag of truce to capt. Hood, offering him fresh water if he wanted it. The Turkish army 50,000 in number had arrived at Damascus, but dare not advance into Egypt until spring on account of the plague. The Arabs give no quarter, and they fight desperately on both sides. Buonaparte lives rather gaily at Cairo, and has opened the harems of his troops. Very few of the transports are burnt as our ships could not approach them.

March 27.

Extract of a letter from the Rev. Mr. Nelson, father to the Baron of the Nile, to the Rev. Mr. Bryan Allot, (who is living in the neighbourhood of Burnham) in answer to a congratulary Epistle on the late Victory, dated October, 1798.

"My great and good Son went into the world without fortune, but with a heart replete with every moral and religious virtue, these have been his compass to steer by; and it has pleased god to be his shield in the days of battle, and to give success to his wishes, to be of service to his country.

"His country seems sensible of his services—but should he ever meet with ingratitude, his scars will cry out and plead his cause—for at the siege of Bastia he lost an eye, at Teneriffe an arm, on the memorable 15th of Feb. he received a severe blow on his body, which he still feels, and now a wound on his head. After all this, you will believe his bloom of countenance must be faded, but the spirit beareth up yet as vigorous as ever.

"On the 29th of last month (Sept.) he completed his fortieth year, cheerful generous and good, fearing no evil because he has done none, an honor to my grey hairs which with every mark of old age, creep fast upon me."

By this Day's Mail.

PROVIDENCE May 15.

Extract of a letter from the Surgeon of the ship Ann and Hope, of this port, dated Whampoa (China) Dec. 17, 1798.

"I wrote you (via London) from Port-Jackson, in New-Holland, and gave a circumstantial account of the voyage, till our arrival there. I will add, that after beating several days off Port-Jackson, and finding it in vain to contend with adverse winds and a strong current, we fell to leeward, and ran into Botany-Bay, "that southern realm, and land of rogues," where we anchored October 21. Next day Messrs. Snow, Thompson, Page, jun. and myself, went to Sydney, a British settlement about 9 miles distant, where we waited on governor Hunter, and were politely received. After tarrying two days, we returned to the ship, accompanied by some of the first characters at Sydney, who dined on board. On the 25th, after having completed our wooding and watering, we again put to sea.

"On the 9th of November, off New-Georgia, spoke the ship Jenny, Capt. R. Brown from Boston, formerly of New-York, bound for Canton. He informed us, that, agreeably to this orders, he had touched at the island of New-Amsterdam, and taken off a number of the crew of a Boston sloop, that had been wrecked there; the rest of the crew preferred remaining on the island. On the 30th of November, at half past 4, P. M. we made the island of Tinian, 7 leagues distant. Next day came to anchor in the road, and the Captain, with 25 men, went ashore. As we lay at anchor, we discovered by means of a glass two flags flying on Lord Anson's beach, and a man walking backward and forward seemingly in great agitation. When the pinnace drew near the shore, he hailed her, and enquired what countrymen we were. Being told, he was questioned in turn. He replied, that he was an unfortunate Lascar, cast away there about 18 months since, in the brig Bramin, from Macaco, Captain Swain, formerly of Providence (R. I.) When the Captain went ashore, he prostrated himself at his feet, in the oriental manner. He informed us that he was the only human being on the island, and begged to be taken on board, and delivered from death. The scene was affecting. Capt. Page consoled him by assuring him that he should return to Macaco in the ship, where he would find vessels bound for Bengal, and restored to his friends. He is about 25 year of age, had been the surang or head of the gang, (a term answering to boatswain with us) and is a man of ability. He converses in English, French, Spanish, Portuguese and Malay, beside his own language. He informed us that the brig was originally commanded by Capt. M'Clellan, an Irishman, who died at Leuconia; that the mate, whose name was Swain, succeded to the command; that they arrived at Tinian about 18 months since, and preserving no order, the Captain and his mistress being ashore and the people on board intoxicated, she parted her cables in the monsoon at night, and struck on a reef, where she went to pieces. The people were all saved except one, and part of the cargo was likewise preserved. The crew lived some months in huts, after, which the whites were taken off by a vessel bound to the north-west coast. The Lascars, 9 or 10 in number, remained till the arrival of a Spanish vessel, when they were confined in irons, and all carried off except this unfortunate man, who escaped into the woods. When the Spaniards had sailed, he returned to the huts, which he found plundered of every thing saved from the wreck. Here he had spent his time in solitude and tears till our arrival.

"Tinian abounds with fruit, such as oranges, limes, guavas, the bread fruit, cherries, plumbs, beans, cocoes and cabbage; cotton and indigo are also in great plenty. The cattle are numerous and large, and hogs and fowls abundant. We saw some remains of the pyramidical pillars mentioned by Lord Anson, but none of them are standing. This island, even in its present uncultiveted state, appears to be one of the finest and most desirable spots on earth. We remained there about 12 hours, got a supply of vegetables, and then departed. It lies it lat. 15 N. long. 146 E.

"P. S. It is no small compliment to the Ann and Hope, to say that she outsails the Jenny, as the latter has been allowed to be the swiftest sailer out of America."

A coppered sloop is arrived at Newport from Manilla, after a passage of 6 1-2 months. Left there two French frigates, which did not discover any hostile intentions towards American vessels. About 25 days since was boarded by a French privateer, which had taken several vessels to the northward of Bermuda, among them mention was made of a R. Island schr. and a valuable ship from Charleston. The privateer was bearing away for the West-Indies, having compleated her cruise.

NORFOLK, May 14.

Citizens, Look Out!!

It appears that this place has been for some time past infested by a gang of villains who have hitherto escaped detection. A man by the name of Clark, who went from hence, was apprehended at Petersburgh on Thursday last, charged with having picked the pocket of Colonel Wells, of Amelia county, of a pocket book containing 26 tobacco notes, exceeding 1400*l.* value at the Theatre on the preceding evening: the notes had been sold, and Clark had received a payment. A letter was sent last mail to the post-master here, stating that a correspondence was going forward which might lead to a discovery of the gang; a magistrate, therefore, attended at the Post Office on Sunday morning, who arrested a certain female, and secured some letters, which implicated several persons; particularly a man named War (or Waugh) one Ellesworth, and another called John Powers against whom warrants were immediately issued. Powers was arrested, underwent an examination yesterday, and is now confined in the jail of this Borough; the two former have not yet been taken. The Public will do well to be guarded—the more so, as no exact description of their persons can be obtained.

"The friends to government in this county have succeeded in electing, both to Congress and the state assembly, men hearty in the cause of government. IT is more important at this moment, than it can possibly be at any time hence, to attach ourselves with zeal to the election of Mr. Ross. Old Vice and his adherents understand this matter better than we, and their early activity, is a lesson to us that should not be disregarded. Our enemies have done much for us, in the selection they have made of a candidate; for we still think so favorably of mankind, as to believe, that a better qualification than the possession of every vice is necessary to the attainment of their suffrage. But much still remains for us to do; since, amidst the corruption which is inundating the age, the foulest of crimes are not the least frequently glossed over with the perversion of virtues—Thus, turbulence and insolence have been styled Republicanism—confusion, equality—anarchy, reform—devotion to France, patriotism.—This is the vocabulary of United Irishmen and of the slaves of France; but when it is proposed to us, that we elect one of either tribe to rule over us, it is surely high time to look forward to the operation of their code.

With Empson for Governor of this Commonwealth, and Dudley for Chief Justice, (though we might indeed, breathe, for a season) the air already polluted, would soon become deleterious, and patriotism and virtue would flee the tottering State. But, like their ancestors, their race would have an end; and the Mammon of Blood, on whose altar they had immolated their country, would soon put rats-bane in their porridge.

The life of a Democrat is one continued scene of outrage upon the decencies of life, and the principles of fellowship by which the intercourse of society is sustained. One of the first moral writers of the age, remarks, that "a man's first care should be to avoid the reproaches of his own heart; his next to escape the censures of his fellow-men." The prime purpose of a Democrat seems to be, to render himself offensive to every one he comes in contact with, except a few of his fellow conspirators, with whom a common exacerbation of soul harmonizes him in hellish accordance. Like the Houhnhm philosopher, Godwin, he is happy so long as his evil deeds elude the public scorn, or the pub-justice, and like him he believes there are no moral evils; but that pain, disgrace, and the like, are the chief enemies of mortal enjoyment.

MAJOR SERGEANT.

This Officer, having been charged with uttering some infamous expressions at a Beer House in Sixth-street, we are desired to state that he has since entirely done away those offensive words by an acknowledgment which has been accepted, wherein he declares, "that he has repeatedly reprobated the conduct of the Editor of the Aurora, in publishing falsehoods arraigning the conduct of the troops on the Northampton expedition."

COMMUNICATIONS.

The foes to our Government are active, intelligent, united, and artful. Possessed of no property, confusion is to them no calamity; of no character, infamy carries with it to them no horrors. What hold then is there upon their conduct? None, unless it be the fear of personal suffering and how long will this fear operate, if our Courts of Justice are shamefully converted into theatres for the display of mere mock tragedies?

If a daring banditti had declared that none of their brotherhood should be punished by law and that civil process dare not touch them, what should we think of the energy of the municipality that was terrified by the threat. This is precisely the cry of the jacobins with regard to their partizans and accomplices.

MR. FENNO,

The mutual agreement between our City Corporation and the Schuylkill Bridge Company to erect the Bridge at High-street, has given universal satisfaction, and there is now no doubt of success in the undertaking. I have however, taken the liberty to suggest that the Bridge would become freed from the toll by the sinking fund much sooner if on the original plan of Mr. Penn, the grounds on the west side of the river were laid out into lots and streets in conformity with the intentions of the venerable founder of Philadelphia.

I am informed that on observing, the summer south western breezes brought with them a sickly vapour from the marshes below, Mr. Penn formed the design of fixing a part of the city on the western side of the river, and from our recent experience in the bad effect of this vapour in spreading the yellow fever, there can be little doubt but that all Proprietors will unite with the Corporation on any plan to extend the City on its most healthy side, which would prevent the necessity of flying to the country for health if we should ever be so unfortunate as to be visited again by contagion or by excessive fall fevers the natural consequence of vapour from the marshes below. CIVIS.

The British March Packet has arrived at Halifax.

A vessel has arrived at Boston, which sailed from Liverpool the 30th March in company with other American armed ships for different parts of the United States.—The convoy was not expected to sail before the 25th of April.

This vessel brings a report of an action between the French and Austrians armies, in which the former is said to have been worsted.

Departed this life on Thursday last, the 16th inst, in the 30th year of her age, MRS MARY MAULL, the amiable consort of Mr. Robert Maull of this City, and daughter of Mr. Joseph Engle of the Northern Liberties.

If personal worth, domestic and uniform virtue, agreeable manners, relative affection, and a steady, conscientious regard for religious worship, could have rescued any one from the grave; then had this Lady been still spared to administer happiness to a bereaved husband, an afflicted father, numerous connections, and a select circle of sympathizing friends.—But HEAVEN ordained otherwise, and unexpectedly removed her from every earthly scene, to a participation of joys more substantial!

Her remains were conveyed the day following to the Baptist burial-ground, and interred in the presence of a respectable number of connections, neighbours, and citizens; the obsequies being performed by the Rev. Dr. Rogers.

Extract from a letter from the Log-Book of the brig Susannah, Alexander Coombs, master.

"April 18th, at 7 A. M. got under weigh at Sandy-hook and stood out to sea, at half after seven, observed a British armed brig of 12 guns, called the Earl of Moira, commanded by Jones Fawson, getting also under weigh and standing out after us. At 8, the Susannah hauled up for the island of St. Thomas, where she was bound; and the Earl of Moira, instead of proceeding on her voyage to Halifax, to which place she was bound, hauled up and gave chace to the said brig Susannah. At 1, P. M. the Earl of Moira came up and boarded us, and captain Fawson, after having taken out Mr. Story, mate, and all the foremast men, and taken possession of all our papers, put a prize master and crew of his own men on board, ordered her to proceed to Halifax, where she arrived on the 24th.

At the time she was captured, the highlands of Neversink bore N. w. by w. distance three leagues.

Capt. Jones Fawson, after having taken possession of the Susannah, declared that "he had waited for her in New-York, and was resolved to pursue, take, and make prize of her whenever she sailed."
